Piping calls for Galilee Basin CSG

Thu, 3 March 2011

WestSide Corporation Chief Executive Julie Beeby has said that coal seam gas (CSG) production from the Galilee Basin could one day provide power for Queensland's western region.

Ms Beeby said that piping Galilee Basin CSG to the region would be a "more economic proposition" than building the proposed electricity transmission line from Townsville to Mt Isa in order to provide electricity to the area.

A WestSide spokesperson confirmed that the company is "looking to go west", and that it would be strategically positioned to power nearby mining and industrial towns.

"It's one of the options that the company is considering if it proves up commercial reserves in the Galilee," WestSide said.

"We're targeting reserves with an initial four-hole campaign in 2011 in the Galilee Basin."

WestSide's Meridian SeamGas joint venture partner Mitsui has provided a notice of intent to farm in to earn up to 49 per cent of both of WestSide's Galilee Basin tenements, ATP 974P and ATP 978P. WestSide believes the area could contain up to 21 Tcf of gas-in-place.
